Author Don Wilson will talk about researching and writing this 336-page history of his ancestor Patrick Norton, one of the first shore whalers to settle in the Marlborough Sounds, and Patrick's Ngāi Tahu wife Tangitu. Arrested for theft in Galway and sentenced to seven years transportation, Patrick served out his sentence, signed on to his first ship in Sydney and began a new life as a sealer and whaler in the Southern Ocean. He arrived at Te Awaiti in 1831. With the Keenan, Guard, Love, Jackson and Heberley families the Nortons settled in the Sounds and their descendants were still whaling in the 1960s.
